Final Preparation for MRCS Part A

This intensive one-day course was specifically designed for candidates appearing for the exam on 12th January 2016. Led by Professor Stuart Enoch, the Convenor of the renowned Cardiff MRCS OSCE courses. The course was intended for candidates that have done adequate prior revision and wish to brush-up the whole of the exam syllabus in one day. There were no lectures and the entire day was focused on 'rapid fire' discussion of the SBA and EMQ questions/answers that are most important and likely to come up in the exam. The sessions highlighted only the 'must know' areas and took the candidate through the core topics in Applied Basic Sciences and Principles of Surgery in General (Clinical Problem Solving). The one day course was calculated to be worth an average of 30 hours of individual revision.

The course, amongst others, covered the following areas:

- Applied surgical anatomy.
- General physiological principles.
- System specific physiology.
- General principles of pathology.
- System specific pathology.
- Principles of surgery in general.
- All surgical specialties.

DH

Wythenshawe Hospital, Manchester, United Kingdom

The course was just great. I don't know if I passed or not, but I am so happy I could attend this course. Fantastic teaching, I could understand everything. I will definitely recommend this course to whoever will think about doing the MRCS. Thank you for your effort.

BD

Queen Elizabeth Medical Centre, Birmingham, United Kingdom

Very well organised course with friendly knowledgeable staff. The course was a great way to refresh the most important topics for the exam. It allowed me to pinpoint gaps in my knowledge which I would have missed otherwise.

BP

University Hospital of Wales, Cardiff, United Kingdom

Really good informative course. The course was good and provided excellent value for money. I will definitely recommend it to my friends.
