Cardiff MRCS Course: Anatomy, Pathology and Physiology for MRCS OSCE - Preparatory Course for October 2020 Exam

COVID-19 has disrupted the academic progress and the preparatory timetable for many trainees who intend to appear for the MRCS OSCE examination this year. With the new dates now confirmed (October 2020) by the Intercollegiate Committee for Basic Surgical Examinations, many trainees would greatly benefit from a one-day preparatory course which will kickstart their revision.

This course covered the 'knowledge component' that makes up 160 marks (8 stations) in the MRCS OSCE. It covered the commonly tested and high-yield topics in anatomy, pathology, microbiology, physiology, and critical care. This course provided a solid revision of knowledge and a sound transition from the MRCS Part A to the MRCS OSCE in October 2020.

The day was calculated to be equivalent to 30 hours of individual revision.

This attendance course was delivered to a small group of delegates and complied with the Health Authority and Government guidelines for social distancing and other appropriate measures.
