

Exeter Global Surgery Conference

Feedback - April 2023

Exeter Global Surgery Conference

The Exeter Global Surgery Conference was hosted by The University of Exeter Surgical Society at the Royal Devon and Exeter Hospital. The aim of the conference was to bring delegates from the student community together and provide inspiration with regard to the different fields of surgery and a role in global surgery. The event sought to give insight into some of the issues around Global surgery including inequities, ethics, advocacy, partnership working, and sustainability. In addition the event highlighted some of the emerging technologies and innovations which will guide the future of surgery in the global context.

The conference provided a platform for sharing and discussing challenges and opportunities in the field and building collaborations among individuals and organisations working in global surgery. A number of surgical workshops provided delegates with an opportunity for practical teaching.

The event sought to provoke discussion about the future of surgery in the Global context, whilst providing an exciting and interactive day for delegates.

I really enjoyed the talk from the core surgical trainees about applying to surgery.

CP
University of Exeter Medical School, Exeter, UK

Great teaching, very good learning experience and great insight into surgery and global surgery.

University of Exeter Medical School, Exeter, UK

I intend on going into surgery, so this conference was incredibly useful in helping me to understand surgery across the globe and how it differs, and what the most important aspects are. If I end up deciding to work in a different country for any period of time I'll be much more open to what the experience may be like as a result of this conference. All of the teaching and presentations were done to a very high standard, and I feel like I learnt a huge amount about global surgery.
