Global Health and Undergraduate Research Opportunities: A Teaching Series

This teaching series, held in conjunction with Keele University School of Medicine and São Paulo State University (UNESP), invited students, nurses, pharmacists and doctors from the United Kingdom, Brazil and the United States of America to come together to listen to speakers with global health or research experience. Across the teaching series, various topics were discussed, including:

- o Malaria, Ebola, HIV, Tuberculosis, Leishmaniasis and Trypanosomiasis
- o Humanitarian aid work and communicable disease research in the Philippines, Haiti, India, Brazil, Liberia and Sierra Leone
- o Global health medical and surgical organisations for nurses and doctors
- o Student research opportunities: what is available, the application process, how to find internships, and how to network to find the best research project for you
- o Intercalation: how to apply, pros and cons, and its application to your future career
- o International medical students studying in the UK: how to navigate the UKFP application process and documents you require from your home country
- o Specialised/Academic Foundation Programme: how to apply, pros and cons, and its application to your future career
