The New Era of Paediatrics: Technology in Practice

Imperial College London Paediatrics Society held their Annual Conference on the 26th January 2019, titled "The New Era in Paediatrics: Technology in Practice".

Advancements in technology have greatly improved paediatric outcomes over the years. This event involved talks by renowned paediatricians regarding these technological advancements and what pursuing a career in paediatrics and neonatology entails, an insight into global inequalities in paediatric care, and much more. There were also various workshops focussing on a variety of topics ranging from research opportunities, career advice and emergency medicine in paediatrics to an introduction to coding which will be run by the coding for medics society.

Individual Comments

Explained the pathway to specialising in paediatrics which was very helpful. Interesting to see so many different fields and how invested people are in their research/interests.

SB

Imperial College London Faculty of Medicine, London

Very friendly organisers, overall excellent workshops.

SY

Imperial College London Faculty of Medicine, London

The careers talk was particularly interesting for me as I wasn't really aware of the pathway to becoming a pediatrician. The research workshop was quite good as well as it kept me informed on steps I needed to take. The technology part was good to know especially considering how technology is becoming a part of medicine.
